(All Four Keys Are Essential)

➤ Continual Improvement Culture

A company culture in which on-going, robust continual improvement activity is encouraged and evidenced is vital for success. If you think your company has completed that journey, then you're not there yet. The Leadership of a company has a critical role in achieving and maintaining the culture of the company. MBS can facilitate the steps to achieve — and sustain — an effective, continual improvement (Lean) culture.

➤ Respect For People

Respect for People is demonstrated in many ways other than just spoken words. Being intimately involved in problem solving, helping to determine work methods, being effectively trained in work methods, and being held accountable to carry out that work — all help demonstrate true respect, through action, for this most valuable resource.

MBS can show you how.

➤ Effective Tools

It's important to have an overall knowledge of the continual improvement tools in your tool box (see partial list on other side). But it's even more important to know which tool is appropriate for the continual improvement opportunity at hand. MBS reveals these tools to your employees and teaches them how to select and use the appropriate tools through actual in-the-workplace activities.

➤ Effective Training

The clearest instructions or possession of the most effective tools are useless unless employees are effectively trained in how to use those tools. MBS can "train the trainers" in your company on the most effective training methods.

"A company's people are truly its most valuable resource. When they achieve their full potential, through training and involvement, the company reaps many benefits. I can show you how to accomplish that."

- David McGan
